THE VISION

When Harvey Firestone and his friends first saw the land that would become The Surf Club in the 1920s, they were seeking the most idyllic location for a private club dedicated to the sea, the sun and all things social—and with these nine remarkable acres on the Atlantic, they found it. Thus began a gracious and colorful chapter in history of Surfside, Florida as the Club became a gathering place for the most exceptional figures of the past eighty years.

I had long hoped to build something unique in South Florida—a place to live that would incorporate the most refined architecture and design sensibilities of contemporary culture for people who value the privacy, elegance and hospitality of an earlier age. When I learned of The Surf Club's storied past and exuberant traditions, it was clear we had a unique opportunity to respect and preserve the legacy of the Club, while contributing new elements that would make the experience of living here absolutely unparalleled.

Richard Meier, architect extraordinaire, and Isadore Sharp, founder and CEO of Four Seasons Hotels and Resorts immediately came to mind as masters who could assist in making my vision come to life.

The Surf Club Four Seasons Hotel and Private Residences adds Meier's intelligent and purposeful architecture to the bespoke luxury and service that define the Four Seasons lifestyle—while emphasizing the provenance of the Club itself. The Surf Club Four Seasons will join the Bal Harbour Shops and the Indian Creek Country Club in defining Surfside, Florida.

Our promise is to execute the project impeccably. To that end, we are also working with architect and designer Joseph Dirand to create spaces that are convivial and sophisticated; architect and designer Lee Mindel to collaborate with Richard Meier, and integrate his refined touch into Meier's masterwork; real estate doyenne Louise Sunshine to develop thoughtful features and amenities that will make every residence special; architect Kobi Karp and his firm KKAID to incorporate their expertise and experience; and Coastal Construction to oversee refurbishment of the existing structure and the construction of the new buildings.

We believe that the future of The Surf Club Four Seasons Hotel and Private Residences will be even more remarkable than its legendary past.

INTRODUCTION

The Surf Club Four Seasons Hotel and Private Residences is the realization of a vision of luxury living in the twenty-first-century, built on the glamour of old Miami.

The eternal allure of the shoreline that The Surf Club Four Seasons adorns has been paired with the pure brilliance of architect Richard Meier, known for designing the Getty Center in Los Angeles and a recipient of the Pritzker Prize, architecture's highest honor. Meier's complex of buildings for The Surf Club Four Seasons—two residential towers flank the Four Seasons Hotel at The Surf Club—are nestled within The Surf Club's historically protected palace of whimsy, a Mediterranean Revival masterpiece designed by Russell Pancoast in 1930.

It's an extraordinary circumstance for a historic social club to serve as the architectural foundation for a contemporary hotel, especially a hotel offering Four Seasons standards of service and care. Aptly enough, Four Seasons Hotel at The Surf Club is also part of the legacy of luxury that is the portfolio of Four Seasons historic hotels, a cultivated collection of properties that includes the 15th century Four Seasons Hotel Milano and Four Seasons Hotel George V, Paris, built in 1928.

The original Surf Club was created in the same time period as the George V, a hotel that captures the essence of Paris. The Surf Club is also a touchstone of its home city, an iconic property that has always defined the essence of Miami.

Throughout the design process, Meier remained conscious of The Surf Club's place in history, and he has successfully transformed a venerable social institution into a 21st century haven that speaks to the age-old yearning for the transcendence of true style: "The Surf Club and this beautiful beach have always been a kind of Nirvana. The challenge was to integrate an amazing building from the 1930s into new, human-scale contemporary buildings."

Since the 1930s, the legends that have passed through The Surf Club's loggia, dubbed "Peacock Alley," have included Frank Sinatra, Noel Coward, Marlene Dietrich, Grace Kelly, and Winston Churchill. In the new era of The Surf Club Four Seasons glamour, Peacock Alley has been brought back to its former glory, and the new Churchill's Bar will honor The Surf Club's most celebrated guest. The public areas of Four Seasons Hotel at The Surf Club—which encompass a breathtaking lounge and sophisticated restaurant with an oceanfront terrace, in the original Surf Club building—have been designed by the Paris-based Joseph Dirand: Some seventy-seven guestrooms, located within the hotel tower created by Richard Meier, have also been designed by Dirand.

Dirand has a gift for working with historical buildings, and Four Seasons Hotel at The Surf Club offers a chance to reinterpret both American history—"a specific era of luxurious social clubs, the sexy and glamorous life"—and Miami itself, he says. "I love the touches of Cuba, Spanish architecture, and Art Deco, the palette of colors that come from the landscape, the sand, and the sea. Miami is such an inspiring place, and this hotel is a great opportunity to create the true feeling of Miami." Under the aesthetic direction of Dirand, a new stomping ground for contemporary sophisticated society is being created from the legacy of the original Surf Club.

At The Surf Club Four Seasons Private Residences, every detail of construction, architecture, interior design, and world-class amenities is supervised by Four Seasons. This active and dynamic management role adds to the long-term value of a bespoke lifestyle.

Four Seasons Private Residences will be a prestigious, low-key, residential address with all the advantages of living in a grand hotel. Homeowners can come and go easily—on-demand car service is available for transport to and from the airport.

There is also 24-hour security staff, in-residence laundry, and valet service, too, is on hand, as well as grocery provisioning, business center assistance, and maintenance and repair services.

Butler service and housekeeping are also available, along with dog groomers and an extensive list of other residential services.

Houseguests can be accommodated at Four Seasons Hotel at The Surf Club, and entertaining is possible at the hotel or in the privacy of home. In-residence dining and event catering make home entertaining simple. Room service is also available for entertaining poolside or on the beach, making dining an easy matter.

The certainty that every detail is being looked after allows residents of The Surf

Club Four Seasons Private Residences to devote more time to business, loved ones, and recreation. The property has four heated swimming pools, two resident-only fitness centers, and a 15,000-square-foot oceanfront Spa and Wellness center.

Homeowners at The Surf Club Four Seasons Private Residences will be part of an internationally celebrated and highly prestigious brand, a hotel and resort group that is expert at curating authentic travel experiences at destinations around the world.

The dedicated residential concierge at The Surf Club Four Seasons Private Residences will make sure that every homeowner's experience is exceptional.

THE DREAMSCAPE

The artistry of Richard Meier has brought an incredible transformation to The Surf Club Four Seasons Hotel and Private Residences. Meier's vision of an eternal dreamscape has been brought to fruition by landscape architect Fernando Wong. A great burst of greenery—spanning Medjool date palms, Mahogany trees, and Canary palms, with Confederate jasmine and purple bougainvillea vines climbing up the facade—bridges the pure charm of the original 1930 Russell Pancoast building and Meier's profoundly contemporary architecture.

Off Peacock Alley, an adjacent courtyard garden is a tropical wonderland rich with strangler figs, Madagascar olive trees, and black olives, sculpted into exquisite bonsai-style trees.

The path to the ocean is flanked by stately event lawns with zoysia grass, coconut palms, and sea grape trees aesthetically balanced with sea oats grass. In the 1930s, The Surf Club was a social refuge, its design echoing the opulent private homes of its members.

The Surf Club Four Seasons, Miami's most time-honored social club will once again feel like an Old Florida private estate, a forever beautiful refuge in the sun.

THE CABANAS

In the early years of the original Surf Club, architect Russell Pancoast instinctively understood that the cabanas would always remain the true soul of the property. In that era, the opulent and formal cabanas were home to elaborate luncheons, fashion shows, and such special events as presentations of gleaming new race cars. Throughout that epoch, the passing parade of aristocrats, statesmen, and celebrities on “Cabana Row” often included Winston Churchill, who could be found painting seascapes and sipping cocktails in his cabana.

The transformed cabanas for Four Seasons Hotel at The Surf Club — realized by Joseph Dirand, returns the fabled oceanfront retreats to the essence of their aesthetic allure, those rich vistas of the endlessly beguiling Atlantic Ocean. As with all truly elegant creations, the cabanas at The Surf Club Four Seasons are simple and beautifully executed.

The airy sanctuaries have cool-as-a-breeze terrazzo floors, tropical rattan furniture, and free-standing mirrors reflecting the palm trees outside. In step with the contemporary era of luxury, Dirand’s work on the cabanas is all about the clean lines and pure functional beauty of modernity. This will be South Florida as it is meant to be lived, with grace and elegance infusing every pleasure taken.
